IFE. Institute For Energy Technology

The Institute for Energy Technology (IFE), established in 1948, is a Norwegian research foundation specializing in energy, environmental technology, and nuclear safety. With facilities in Kjeller and Halden, IFE conducts leading research to develop sustainable energy solutions and improve industrial processes.

Role in the Project

As the project coordinator, IFE plays the pivotal role of managing the strategic and operational aspects of the project. Its primary responsibilities include ensuring the smooth implementation of project activities, overseeing the compliance of partners with grant conditions, and liaising with the European Climate, Infrastructure, and Environment Executive Agency (CINEA), the funding body under the Horizon Europe program. Additionally, IFE is tasked with managing financial aspects, including distributing grant funds to the partners and maintaining transparent reporting to the funding authority. Beyond administrative duties, IFE contributes technical expertise, particularly in energy technology and research, to drive innovations within the project.
